To Whom It May Concern:

IC² Institute is an international and trans-disciplinary research unit at The University of Texas at Austin devoted to solving unstructured problems in order to accelerate wealth and job creation for shared prosperity both at home and in developing economies abroad.

The Institute is pleased to work in close collaboration with the House of Tutors, Leaning Center, USA Inc. House of Tutors offers a full range of education and training services. It provides tutoring, standardized test preparation, English as a Second Language [ESL] training and student advisory services.

Past collaboration between IC² Institute and House of Tutors involve projects in Kazakhstan, Mexico, London Middle East Institute, Louisiana State University, and work on a USAid proposal to offer higher education in Iraq. Together we have the capability and resources at hand to successfully get things done.

Globally, IC² Institute has been a leader in knowledge and technology transfer to create economic development programs in stable countries as well as in regions torn by ethnic and political conflict. The IC² Fellows network is worldwide and has extensive experience in constructing collaborative project teams. International initiatives have been successful in Armenia, China, Japan, Jordan, Poland, Russia and the Ukraine.

We look forward to working together on future global economic development projects.

Sincerely,

John Sibley Butler
